CSTD Priority Themes

PRIORITY THEME 1: Technology and innovation for cleaner and more productive and competitive production

- ITU as the co-facilitator for the WSIS Action Line C7: e-Environment: ICT applications can support sustainable development, in the fields of public administration, business, education and training, health, employment, agriculture, science, and in this particular regard, field of green technology and innovation as part of e-environment. ITU has been working closely with the lead facilitator WMO and other co-facilitators UNEP, UN-Habitat and ICAO.
- ITU-T plays a vital role in establishing the trajectory and standardizing digital transformation in cities supporting technology and innovation for cleaner and more productive and competitive production.
- ITU creates a circular economy for electronics, such as through improving expertise in the collection of e-waste data, increasing coverage of national e-waste policy and regulation, and identifying and mapping technological interventions in the e-waste management space
- ITU provides a platform where diverse membership (international organisations, research institutions, academia etc.) can come together to develop international standards that help support developing countries with regard to digital transformation. Initiatives such as the United for Smart Sustainable Cities, the annual WSIS Forum and the WSIS Stocktaking database provide an open platform for knowledge sharing on how cities around the world can benefit from digital technologies.

PRIORITY THEME 2: Ensuring safe water and sanitation for all: a solution by science, technology and innovation

- ITU-T is setting the standard for smart water management to support access to safe water and sanitation, globally. International standards such as the ones developed by ITU help countries, cities and organizations better understand water management, identify the infrastructure needed to support smart water management and how to implement various policies and measures accordingly.
- Through the WSIS Forum and WSIS&SDG TalkX, stakeholders have an opportunity to showcase examples of projects/policies of the management of water and sanitation and provide access to safe water and sanitation for all.
- ITU recently published a key resource on Frontier technologies to protect the environment and tackle climate change that highlights successfully implemented frontier technologies to address the issues surrounding water management.
- The United for Smart Sustainable Cities \(U4SSC\) is a global UN initiative coordinated by ITU, UNECE and UN-Habitat, and supported by 14 UN bodies to provide an international platform for information exchange and partnership building to guide cities and communities in achieving the UN Sustainable Development Goals. This initiative strengthens national STI capabilities to help address challenges surrounding water management at the city level.
